Sixteen years ago Mary Allen Lindemann and Alan Spear opened this tiny coffee shop in Portland, Maine with the idea of building a place for the community. Over the years, the shop has grown from their original Congress Street location to three other shops and a micro roaster where they process all their beans. I now have a new appreciation for Bells. Sleigh driver Vern Shaw donned a red cowboy hat with white trim and the two mares, Babe and Molly, came complete with the definitive bells on their bobtails. The snow was mesmerizing; it blanketed the fields and iced the branches. Carols blasted from the small portable radio and we sang along in the back of the red sleigh, drunk on Christmas spirit. I found myself transported to Narnia, looking out for Mr. Tumnus lamppost. The magic of Christmas was right there in the back of that sleigh. Valley Ridge Farm manager David Hadfield, 68, has been running the sleigh rides with Shaw for the past six years. Police said they now believe another man, Christopher Caviness, was the real killer. Under pressure from Armstrong's attorneys, Greensboro investigators re tested evidence from the case and matched a palm print from the murder scene with Caviness, who was identified as a suspect by police early in the case.
